

Holding office is a structural position, not just a title

The 537 people recorded in at least one office against the 280 recorded only as members.
Office-holders sit on 10.4 times as many shortest paths and belong to more bodies. The direction is unsurprising; the size is not, and some of it is recording rather than structure — an officer is named in the body's own entry, a member usually is not.

Mean betweenness

Mean bodies belonged to

