

The named owners of the land are mostly not the people in the book

130 property ties: 126 named owners across 53 localities, in 49 clusters that never join up — 25 of them a single owner with a single estate. Only 26 of the 126 owners have a biographical notice: the volume records rural property without recording the proprietors as persons.

