

The two communities are recorded in much the same trades

Share of each community's coded notices, by primary occupational category. Ten largest categories. Law, medicine, commerce and the crafts sit within a couple of points of each other. The gaps that do open are in the categories tied to one state or the other: engineering, architecture is 7 times heavier on the European side, and office-holding in the beylical administration — the Tunisian side's own ladder — barely appears among Europeans at all. See fig. 59 for the same split drawn on the colonist/native axis.
