

Holding office is a structural position, not just a title

The 538 people recorded in at least one office against the 279 recorded only as members. Office-holders sit on 10.3 times as many shortest paths and belong to more bodies. The direction is unsurprising; the size is not, and some of it is recording rather than structure — an officer is named in the body's own entry, a member usually is not.

Mean betweenness

Mean bodies belonged to

